'THE BUCKTAILS' 42nd Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry Regiment

Also known as the 'Kane Rifle Regiment' (having been founded by Thomas L. Kane in April '61) the '13th Pennsylvania Reserves' and the '1st Pennsylvania Rifles'.

The 'Bucktails' as they were known, because of the squirrel tails fastened to their kepis (or hats) were largely made up of backwoodsmen from Northern Pennsylvania! Like other regiments of sharpshooters they were excellent shots being issued with Sharps rifles in August 1862 and later with a number of Spencer repeaters. For a good while they were the scourge of the Confederate army until the rebels adopted the 'Bucktails' tactics and began to get the better of them.

Other Light Infantry Brigades were formed, eg. one consisting of the 149th and 150th Pennsylvania Infantry (2nd, 3rd Division 1 Corps) which copied the Bucktails insignia of the squirrel tails. The above fought well at Gettysburg although they were scorned by the 42nd who jealously guarded their reputation as the original 'Bucktails'.
